IF CLOTHES COULD TALK, what a sad tale they would tell of short life the result of rubbing, twisting, burning and eating—made necessary when washed in the old-fashioned way with common soap. They would say we dread wash-day as much as do the poor, misguided women who still hold antiquated ideas of muscle and the washboard. NOT SO THE WOMEN, or their clothes who wash in the modern way with the modern means.

PYLE'S PEARLINE WASHING COMPOUND.
It saves the clothes; the women; their time and health, and is absolutely harmless to all but dirt—it is death to that. MILLIONS USE PEARLINE. Try it—but beware of imitations and peddlers.

Mr. Nelson gave the pedigree and blood of his blooded stock, as each animal was shown to the halter. These gentlemen were very much pleased with what they saw, and were surprised to learn of the many valuable horses in this State.

It is generally understood here, says an Augusta despatch, that an important change is soon to take place at the Soldiers' National Home at Togus; and that General Charles W. Tilden, of Hallowell, now Secretary of the Senate, is to become treasurer in place of Captain Cobaugh, the present treasurer. General Tilden is one of the best known as well as most gallant of the Maine soldiers. He was Colonel of the Sixteenth Maine, and at Gettysburg with that regiment, held position on the Emmitsburg road to cover the retreat of the Eleventh Corps on the first day of the fight. He accomplished the purpose, but the regiment was sacrificed, and he with others was taken prisoner and confined in Libby. He was one of those who escaped from that prison by the famous tunnel. General Tilden was twice a prisoner in the South, escaping each time. He has been Secretary of the Senate for a good many years. He is treasurer and secretary of the Hallowell Granite Company, and was a near friend of the late Governor Bodwell.

Waldo.

Henry P. Folch, of Prospect, was struck on the head by the limb of a falling tree Thursday, of last week, while cutting wood, and his skull fractured. He died Monday. He leaves a widow and seven children, five of whom are less than six years of age and the baby is now dangerously ill. Last October his house and its contents were destroyed by fire.

Washington.

Mr. Stanhope, of Milltown, has leased the handsome residence of Mr. Caleb Gilman, in Meddybemps, and will keep hotel there. The place is becoming famous as a summer resort for parties from Boston and vicinity. The handsome lake contiguous to the town is very attractive to the lovers of the piscatorial art. Mr. Gilman will visit Augusta, and Milford, Mass., shortly.

David W. Legalle, father of ex-Alderman David B. Legalle, of Biddeford, a man seventy-five years of age, attempted suicide, Tuesday night, by stabbing himself with a pocket knife. He was hopelessly ill with a cancer in the throat. He had made ten ugly gashes in his throat, arm and side when discovered, reports the Biddeford Journal.

Benjamin Lord, of New York, formerly of Lebanon, died July 5, 1881, seized of valuable real and personal estate in New York City. Since the probate of his will, it has been contested and its provisions objected to in some form or other down to the present time. At last it is in progress of settlement among his descendants, devisees and assignees, who number over two hundred, scattered about in Maine, New Hampshire and various other States.

It is stated that $50,000 has been offered for the California race-horse Stamboul.

About two hundred persons were killed and one thousand injured by the recent earthquakes in Costa Rica.

The rabbit pest is again making headway in Australia. The means taken to eradicate it have proved insufficient.

More oranges, lemons, bananas, figs and raisins are consumed in the United States than in any other country in the world.

The story comes from Florida that a Key West fisherman rubs his body with kerosene oil and swims among sharks in safety.

The maple sugar harvest has begun in California. The sugar is declared to be nearly as delicious as the New England article.

Lieutenant Henn, of the Galatea, proposes to visit America again, and will sail with Mrs. Henn in time to join the New York races in August.

Miss Virginia S. Mars, who was married at Accomac Court House, Va., recently, weighs three hundred and fifty pounds, though she is only eighteen years old.

An orange grove of thirty thousand trees is to be planted in Pomona Valley, Cal., by a syndicate of Illinois and Iowa capitalists. It will be the largest in the world.

In one day last week six hundred and eighty six alligator hides were brought into Fort Ogden, Fla., for sale. There is money in the saurian, and the massacre goes on.

A citizen of Elkhart, Ind., reported that Miss Georgia Davis chewed tobacco. She sued him for slander, proving that she simply chewed gum, and the jury gave her $300 damages.

The oldest school teacher in active service in Vermont is A. D. Searles, who began teaching in 1811 at the age of nineteen. He obtained his first certificate from the poet John G. Saxe.

A horse farm of 120,000 acres, near Cheyenne, W. T., is said to be the largest in the world. It requires two hundred miles of wire fencing, with sixty-five men to look after the horses, which number five thousand.

A cheat, who had but sixty cents in his pocket, took blank checks, went from store to store in Cairo, Ill., and made purchases of over $100, filling out a check in each case. A man who signs his name to a check with a great flourish, is supposed to be rich.

Dr. Barnard, president of Columbia College, says he is heartily in favor of a law prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors. The free use of tobacco in all its forms; but especially in the form of cigarettes, is doing much to undermine the health of the rising generation, and is nearly as noxious as the giant evil of drunkenness."

Representative O'Ferrall, of Virginia, made a long speech in the House one day last week. Finally he exclaimed: "Mr. Speaker, my time has almost expired." "So have we," cried out a solemn and sincere voice in the press gallery. Mr. O'Ferrall went no further but sat down, as his colleagues were shouting with laughter.

Major Pond has received a letter from "Max O'Rell," in which he says: "Of course my book is full of absurdities. How could it be otherwise? I should pity from the bottom of my heart the American who would take the book seriously, and who would not or could not see under a little coating of criticism my love and admiration for America and her dear people. ..."

The horses on some of the stage routes in Nevada are trained to wear snow shoes. After an animal becomes used to them he can travel four or five miles an hour where it would be impossible to go that distance in a week without them. ...

Mrs. Langtry has temporarily laid aside the part of Lady Macbeth, after giving twenty-three performances of it, but explicitly disclaims the intention to discard it from her repertory. On the contrary, her success in it has been so considerable that she will retain the character as a prominent feature in her professional labors.

Mme. Mutsu, wife of the Japanese minister at Washington, since the season has begun, has made over 1,200 social calls, and when she came here, last spring, she could not speak a word of English. Now she can carry on a conversation, and is able to remember and correctly pronounce the names of thousands of people to whom she has been introduced.

A woman near Ventura, Cal., recently made $100,000 in land speculation. This fired her with the ambition to get up a special "boom," and make a million if possible. So she chartered a train from San Francisco, six hundred miles away, gave a free ride, a free lunch, and free music to all who would come, and held a big sale. But though the train was crowded with people from San Francisco, no one would buy; and instead of making a fortune she lost $20,000. All of which proves that land booms are very uncertain things.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has this paragraph, which contains a suggestive moral: "'There,' said a neighbor, pointing to a village carpenter, 'there is a man who has done more good, I really believe, in this community than any other person who ever lived in it. He cannot talk very much in public, and he doesn't try. He is not worth $2,000, and it is very little he can put down on subscription papers. But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find it out and give them a neighborly welcome and offer them some service. He is on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor and look after his affairs for him. I believe he and his wife keep house plants in winter mainly that they may be able to send little bouquets to friends and invalids. He finds time for a pleasant word to every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one-horse wagon when he has no other load. He has a genius for helping folks, and it does me good to meet him in the streets.'"

Four Hundred Dollars a year at Organ-Grinding.
[New York Graphic.]

This business of grinding hand-organs is rapidly earning a fortune for an Italian family in this city, which owns several very superior instruments of the "piano" variety, such as are operated on light-running hand-carts. These are pushed around the city by pairs of young and pretty maidens, dressed in the picturesque costumes of the Roman peasantry, who serve as performers. One of the two, in each case, turns the crank, of the huge music box, while the other manipulates with deft fingers the sweetly jingling tambourine. The girls are all sisters, daughters of an ancient brigand called Grosse, a mender of the fiddles and things of the profession, and the tunes they render—a majority of them from light French opera—are so melodiously given as to set the most unmusical person a-dancing in spite of himself. And when one of the said organs, on its winding way through the business quarter of the town, pauses to strike up in a side street or alley, all the clerks, counter-hoppers, office-boys and other employes in the neighboring blocks quit work at once to skip round and throw pennies out of the windows. So it is not surprising to hear from the players themselves that they average $10 per day apiece for their work. This is a tidy more than $4,000 a year—including Sundays—for each machine and its attendants. Pretty good pay, is it not?

NEWS FROM EASTERN MAINE.

Bradford Letter.
[Regular Correspondence of Whig and Courier.]

Last Sunday evening, Rev. A. J. Lockhart, of East Corinth, delivered a very able and interesting sermon at the Union church at this place. Rev. S. T. Page was present and assisted in the service.

The remains of the late George W. Hill were brought to this place for burial on Monday. Funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. Joseph Folsom. Rev. J. E. Locke officiated.

The sad intelligence reached this place, last Monday, of the death of Mr. Daniel Wilson, which occurred at his residence in Sullivan, on Saturday. Mr. Wilson was well known and highly respected by many of our citizens, he having spent the early part of his life in this town. Beside his own family, Mr. Wilson leaves three brothers, Miles Wilson and Harvey S. Wilson, of Bradford, John H. Wilson, Esq., of Bangor, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary A. Chamberlain and Mrs. J. A. Fletcher, of Bradford, to mourn his loss.

David Brackett, for nearly thirty years connected with the Bradford tannery, has been confined to his residence several days by reason of sickness. His many friends hope to soon see him out again.

The Sunday School League, at Bradford Centre, will give a musical entertainment, on Thursday evening next, in Libbey's Hall.

From present indications, the spring term of Bradford Free High School will open on February 25, with a good attendance. The Principal, Mr. E. E. Colbath, is well known as an excellent teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Church, of Cherryfield, were in town this week. Mr. Church is proprietor of the tannery at Beddington, where he carries on a large business.

Garland Letter.
[Regular Correspondence of Whig and Courier.]

There is considerable complaint in this vicinity of throat trouble, in some cases quite severe. But only one case of diphtheria is reported and that is the child of Fred Farmer which is quite sick.

Mrs. Russell Murdock died from a heart trouble, and was buried yesterday.

Mr. Murdock is nearly ninety years old and is quite infirm.

The Good Templars of this place installed the following officers for this coming quarter: W. C., Stanton Sawyer; W. V., Maud Knight; W. S., Bert Grinnell; W. F. S., Lottie True; ... Nellie Sawyer; W. M., Mell Pearl; W. G., Arthur Reynolds.

Mr. N. J. Johnson, of Presque Isle, who has been visiting here for a short time, returned home this morning's train from Dexter.

There was a pleasant donation party last Thursday afternoon and evening at Rev. P. B. Thayer's, which not only cheered the heart, but was a financial benefit of about $40 to the pastor.

Whig and Courier.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

C. A. BOUTELLE, Editor

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed: "Editor of Whig and Courier."

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1889.

The Bath Times refers a very dirty paragraph in the Portland Advertiser concerning Bangor to THE WHIG for a "merited rebuke." The utterances of the Advertiser are of too little importance to merit anything but contempt.

Senator-elect Higgins, of Delaware, says the Republicans of that State have a thorough party organization. They do not propose to discontinue their efforts until they gain absolute control of the State. The next State election is two years off, but in the meantime the party is growing stronger daily.

The direct tax bill has been killed so far as the present Congress is concerned.—Commercial.

The bill has not been killed but has gone to the President. Cleveland in obedience to the demand of Southern Brigadiers may and it is claimed will veto it, but Congress has passed it just the same.

It is hinted from Washington that President Cleveland may refuse to sign the Territorial admission bill. The President has done some queer things during his term of office, but it does not seem possible that he will be foolish enough to withhold his signature in this instance. The Democrats have mighty little to expect from the Territories, but these Territories are coming in and for the President to delay their admission would be the height of folly.

Ben Butler claims to have discovered evidence that enough votes were stolen from him in New York in 1884 to give the State to Cleveland. Perhaps we shall known in due time the true story of those New Orleans spoons.—New York World.

The great majority of people have never doubted that enough votes were stolen in New York to give Cleveland his beggarly plurality in 1884. The Democrats failed to make a success of the scheme last year, however, and in a few weeks Cleveland will be forgotten.

Secretary Bayard asserts that he has had a policy and tells what it is. His idea has been that "the military spirit is to be discouraged in a Republic except in so far as it is necessary for purposes of defence." To this end he has devoted four years of intense thought at the State Department. Well, if that was his aim he ought to be satisfied with the results, remarks the New York Tribune. He has not only discouraged military spirit, but national self-respect and all the robust traits of American character.

The Portland papers and some of their contemporaries in the immediate vicinity are very sure that Bangor's Capital boom is a fizzle and that the Capital is certain to go to Portland. Bangor's position so far as the Capital question is concerned is that the time has not arrived to move the Capital and when the Legislature acts on the matter the Portland papers will note that the Capital stays. When the Capital is moved it will be by the direction of the people and then Bangor will be on deck. We have heard our Portland contemporaries bluster before this, but Bangor is not so easily disposed of.

The bolting Democrats in the West Virginia Legislature were yesterday whipped into line and Senator Kenna received a majority of the votes cast. The session of the Legislature has been characterized by revolutionary tactics throughout, the object being to retain control of the Governorship as well as the Senatorship and it is probable that the matter will be ventilated. Gen. Goff was elected Governor, a fact clearly established on the face of the returns, and it now remains to be seen whether the Democratic manipulators will persist in their efforts to steal this office from the people.

The schedule for President-elect Harrison's train from Indianapolis to Washington, has been arranged. It will leave the former place over the Pennsylvania road, at noon on Monday next, and arrive at its destination on Tuesday, at 2.30 P. M. The train will consist of President Roberts' private car, two Pullman sleepers and a baggage car, and will be run as a section of the Atlantic express. No stops will be made between Indianapolis and Pittsburg, except to change locomotives, and after leaving there will go through without further stop to Washington. The President and his family will occupy President Roberts' car, which is now being renovated at the Altoona shops of the Pennsylvania railroad. President Roberts gave personal directions with regard to the furnishing of the car.

Speaking of the agitation concerning the removal of the Capital the Aroostook Herald says: "The special committee appointed on a legislative order, to inquire into the expediency of removal, gave a hearing last week at which the Portland boomers appeared in force and were met by foemen worthy of their steel from Bangor, among whom was our old time friend, Hon. Lewis Barker, who made a magnificent speech. From present indications, the State Government will not be put on wheels this year. The people are not yet ready to assume the extra burden of taxation necessary if a new Capitol is to be erected." The Belfast Journal referring to the same subject says "if the Capital is moved it should go to Bangor" and adds: "Let us get out of debt and reduce taxation rather than expend a million or two of dollars in a building to be occupied by the Legislature once in two years."

The Albany Evening Journal of February 15 says: At the annual dinner of that strong and active organization, the Republican club of New York City, held last Tuesday evening, the responses to the toasts contained many significant political utterances. Congressman Butterworth made a masterly presentation of the argument for a protective tariff and it would be well if his address were printed for general circulation. One of the features of the responses was that of Congressman Boutelle to the toast of "The suffrage." The plain and incisive way in which he presented the facts in reference to the suppression of the ballot in the South fairly startled his hearers. It is high time that the public should hear from the lips of its ablest speakers the truth in reference to this matter. The sneers of the Democratic press and of Southern newspapers in reference to the waving of the bloody shirt and the revival of the sectional issue are intended for no other purpose than to divert attention from this great issue, the gravest that confronts the American people to-day.

"The debate and the evidence resulted in putting the worst features of the South Carolina election law before the country, with the worst possible circumstances, and in emphatically giving the lie to our claim that our election methods are forced on us against our will and by hard necessity, and are used only in self defence to retain control of our property and secure honest administration of our Government. In this contest it was shown very clearly that the law was used, not to keep our own, but to take away that which we had, with almost the formality and directness of a deed of conveyance, given to the negroes."

The above is the comment of the Greenville (S. C.) News on the action of the Democratic House in the Smalls-Elliott election case. The News is a Southern Democratic paper, but it has been outspoken in denunciation of this outrage, while the Boston Post and other doughface organs in the North have applauded the steal.

Signs of Revolution.

[N. Y. Tribune.]

Nothing succeeds like success, is the old saying. So nothing fails like failure, as the free trade Democrats are just now observing. Only six months ago they were driving things with a high hand in the House, cracking the lash about hesitating Democratic Representatives, and reading out of the party men who were distinguished as Democrats when Messrs. Mills, Breckinridge and Company were holding offices under a rebel government. All this was because the candidate for the Presidency, whose election was thought certain, was a free trader and their willing tool. Things have changed. Mr. Cleveland has been defeated, and after a few days will be of no more account than a last year's bird's nest. The party has gone before the people on its free trade issue and has been kicked out of power. Mr. Randall is wanted again, and badly wanted. Seventy-one Democrats, a clear majority of those present, have pledged themselves in writing to support Internal Revenue reduction without regard to change of tariff; in other words, to pitch overboard the free trade policy. Such are the educating influences of defeat.

This is good as far as it goes; but the seventy-one deserters who have grown too numerous to be shot cannot be reckoned defenders of an American policy. They are representatives who no longer dare to oppose all reduction of taxes until they can smash protection. The best that can be said of them is, that they know when they are whipped. With a popular majority against the free trade policy, and no President hereafter to reward treachery to American interests, these patriots decline to batter their heads against a stone wall. They have already achieved a considerable victory in making it impossible to bring the coercive force of a party caucus to bear against them, but their attitude is nevertheless directly hostile to that of their party in the late campaign. Whether the coming parliamentary struggle will result in any reduction of revenue at this session is still doubtful, because the great power of the Speaker, aiding a minority of filibusterers, may defeat the will of more than two-thirds of the House.

But the moral effect of victory in November is not to be denied. It has arrested a movement within the Democratic party which at one time seemed irresistible, and threatened to sweep nearly the entire body of Democratic voters into the crusade of free traders. To appreciate the situation, it must be remembered that a considerable minority of Democratic voters, relatively larger than its representation in Congress, has always been in favor of a protective tariff. This minority was steadily increasing at the South, though the people in that section have so little real part in the Government that the representation of Southern Protectionists in Congress did not increase.

When Mr. Cleveland sent in his message of 1887, and made himself the leader of the crusade against protection, it is probable that nearly or quite a third of the Democratic voters were opposed to him, and yet so powerful was the combination of Executive influence and caucus dictation that at the close of the session only a pitiful fraction of Democratic members held out, and at the close of the Presidential campaign Democratic protectionists on the platform or in the press were no longer to be found. Salem saively the majority supported Mr. Cleveland in the position he had chosen. Victory then would probably have convinced nine-tenths of the Democratic voters who had leaned toward protection, either that they had been in error, or that they ought to suppress their beliefs for the sake of the party.

Now a great army of these voters are more thoroughly convinced than ever that they were in the right. Democratic Representatives have been hearing from them. Protests against the refusal to reduce taxation unless protection should be broken down have been numerous. The shallow notion that free raw materials could be demanded as a kind of protection has lost most of its power over the minds of Democrats. The false hope of winning the farming States by a free trade policy has vanished. Both economic and political conceptions of the situation have been greatly changed by a single election, and the revolution which has begun, strengthened by the increase of protective sentiment at the South, may render the future attitude of the Democratic party on this issue uncertain. The first practical result is likely to be the passage in the next Congress of a better protective measure than could have been carried against a Democratic party united in the support of free trade theories.

About Life Insurance.

Life insurance has grown in favor as its peculiar advantages have become better understood. Within the recollection of our oldest readers it was regarded as sacrilege for one to insure his life. An eminent clergyman once expressed it as a distrust of Divine Providence. Happily for the interests of the people that superstition no longer exists. Life insurance is advocated and practiced by the clergy, the financier, the business man, the farmer, and the laborer, in fact by all classes of society. The question is not now, "Was the deceased insured?" Yes, in the Foreclosure Notice.

Whereas Archibald Pelletier and Augustus Pelletier, on the 5th day of September, A. D. 1885, mortgaged to one Lut und Pelletier the following described real estate, viz: One undivided half of the following described tract, to wit: Beginning at the East bank of Otter Stream and running Easterly on the North line of Lot No. 2, forty rods to the West line of a ten acre lot formerly owned by L. Dunn; thence Southerly along the West line of said Dunn lot, sixteen rods; thence easterly along the South line of said Dunn lot, to the East line of said lot No. 2; thence Southerly along the East line of said lot No. 2, to the Southeast corner thereof; thence Westerly, along the South line of said lot No. 2, to a stake in a ditch which is the Southeast corner of about 21 acres of land sold by Greenwood F. Barton to A. C. Bean on 14th Sept., A. D. 1873, thence down along the North line of said 21 acre lot to Otter Stream, thence up said stream to the place of beginning; said premises being situated in said Milford, (one undivided half of which being hereby conveyed), being same conveyed by A. C. Bean to Augustus Reinue and Frank Gouyea, by deed dated 24th Sept'r, 1879, recorded in the Penobscot Registry of Deeds, Book 0, page 150, and also mentioned in a deed given by said Frank Gouyea to said Archibald Pelletier, dated 19 March, 1873 and recorded in Pen. Registry of Deeds, in which last mentioned deed said Frank conveys to said Archibald the same property herein conveyed to said Edmund Pelletier, the reservations and exceptions mentioned in said deeds, from A. C. Bean and from Frank Gouyea, being also reserved and excepted from this conveyance. And the said Archibald hereby further conveys to said Edmund, another certain tract of land situate in said Milford, to wit: The same premises described in a deed from Rosanna Violette to Archibald Pelletier, dated the 5th day of June, A. D. 1880, recorded in Penobscot Registry of Deeds, Book 513, page 371, all the deeds mentioned in the above description of the land hereby conveyed, are hereby expressly referred to and made a part of this deed. This deed is also intended to convey all buildings situate on any land hereby conveyed. And the said Augustus Pelletier hereby conveys to said Edmund all the right, title and interest he has in any land situate in said Milford, and especially her dower as the widow of Augustus Reinue, (who was also called Augustus Latno, Lotman, or Latourneau) in the undivided half of the lot first above described, of which said Augustus owned by virtue of the deed above described, dated Sept. 24th, 1879, recorded in Penobscot Registry of Deeds, Book 0, page 150, which mortgage is recorded in the Penobscot Registry, vol. 513, page 214, and whereas the said Edmund Pelletier, on the 8th day of February instant, assigned said mortgage to me, Rufus K. Kilgore, (but by a mistake, writing my name Gilgore instead of Kilgore) which assignment is recorded in the same Registry, vol. 580, page 478, and whereas, the conditions of said mortgage have been and remain broken, this is a notice that for that cause I claim a foreclosure thereof.

TRUE'S PIN WORM ELIXIR.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY

MARVELOUS IN ITS EFFECTS!

Mothers, save your children from the terrible sufferings and fatal effects of pin worms by using

DR. JOHN F. TRUE'S

Pin Worm Elixir.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

It is claimed to be the surest, most pleasant and most effectual remedy known for this child killing Disease. As a cure for the wretched, it has no equal. It expels all kinds of worms, and in fact all creatures that infest the bowels of either children or adults, are triumphantly expelled by this wonderful remedy. Testimonials in its favor come to us from all sources where it is known. It not only effectually removes from the system those troublesome and disagreeable worms, but children who have been weak and puny for years, are soon improved and restored to health by its use. It is a mild and gentle laxative. It is purely vegetable and the greatest value. It has also expelled several, some of them eight inches in length. Is spotted, and looks like a water specker and looks like a vertebrae [illegible] water or [illegible].

HAVERHILL'S SCHOOL TROUBLES

Action of the School Board—Action of Father Boucher Severely Criticised

HAVERHILL, Mass Feb 21 At a meeting of the School board last evening, the French parochial school question was again discussed The action of Father O'Brien Boucher who has the management of the school was severely criticized by Dr Desmond, the only Catholic member of the board and others It was unanimously agreed that the course pursued by the manager of the Parochial School was insulting to the School board A long letter from the board to Father Boucher was read and adopted, reviewing the entire matter, quoting the laws sustaining the School board in its action and stating that in their procedures toward the rector of St Joseph's Church the school of which he is in charge and the parents of the pupils therein

The Board Have Been Actuated

by no narrow, vindictive or inimical motive, nor has the question of religious faith for teaching been an element of discussion or action on their part They state that they have sought to do from the highest motives courteously honorably and fearlessly, the duty which the law of the State ordains them to do The board also believes that it has afforded Father Boucher every possible means of knowing what steps must be taken and in what condition the school must be before it can receive approval With regard to

of a committee to confer with Father Boucher the board respectfully refers him to the standing committee on private schools which has full authority in the matter, and also to the Superintendent of Schools who will furnish any information desired The letter closes with a cordial invitation to Father Boucher and teachers of St Joseph's school to visit the public schools with the assurance that it is the board's desire to show the Rector of St Joseph's school and all connected therewith not only courtesy but the utmost friendliness and helpfulness

ECONOMICAL BAKING POWDER

A curious housekeeper of experience recently made a careful practical test of the comparative baking value of a large number of the baking powders in the market, including those of low and high cost. She found that twenty five cents' worth of Horsford's Bread Preparation raised more flour and produced much better results than the same money's worth of the cheap adulterated powders and also that it took fifty cents worth of the ordinary high-cost baking powders to raise the same quantity of flour From this she concluded that it was more economical to use the Horsford's than the low priced adulterated powders, and the product was much better We commend a trial of this experiment by our lady friends

THE LATEST FANCIES Among the latest fancies for a ladies' writing desk is is the real tortoise-shell string box, set in old silver, and metal paper weights in the form of the pensive adjutant bird standing on one leg Then there are the tambourine calendars, and banjo stamp trays and violoncello letter clip, with an oak background The prettiest thing in note paper is a blue gray English wedge-wood There are three sizes of paper and envelopes the smallest of the latter being four inches square Upon them the monogram, name, address or initial is stamped in delicate white to resemble wedge-wood "Stationary baskets" of fine wicker work are new and seem popular They have raised upright centres, holding paper envelopes, china slate and calender on one side, and pens, pencils, crest stamps, sealing wax, etc, on the other

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT A very severe accident happened at Basin Mills Wednesday night Just as the up train was running into the station at that place, a passenger named Fred Gulliver who belongs in Old Town jumped off before the train had stopped He missed his footing and fell under the wheels which passed over both legs crushing them badly The train was stopped, and the injured man was taken to the mill boarding house Physicians were summoned and it was found necessary to amputate both legs one above the ankle, and the other below the knee Yesterday noon he was taken in a team to his home in Old Town, and he stood the ride very well being apparently no worse for it He is about thirty five years of age, and while the shock to his system has been a hard one, he stands a reasonable chance for recovery He is unmarried but has a widowed mother in Old Town It is a terrible accident for the unfortunate man

OAR MAKING Mr W C Taylor, of Orono, is one of the veteran oar makers of the State He has been a resident of the town thirty-eight years, and for thirty five has been in business on his own account He uses steam power in his shop, and generally has three men in his employ He uses up about 80,000 feet of lumber in the course of the year—ash and spruce The oars used by river drivers and fishermen are ash, those for pleasure boats etc, are of spruce which makes a very light, durable oar He has made more spruce oars than ash the past year He has a large demand from Portland and Boston and then his trade at the summer resorts is increasing A few years ago fifty pairs a year were all that were called for at Rangeley Lakes, but now it takes 200 pairs to supply the demand There is also a good demand for fancy oars at Bar Harbor and the other resorts Mr Taylor was at Shirley the other day after lumber to be used in his business

THEY DON'T LIKE WORK The new heel shop at the Augusta jail has been in operation about three weeks and has already reduced the number of inmates from one hundred and fifty to sixty-nine Of those left many have been troubled with severe sick headaches since work commenced, and from all appearances this favorite refuge of the wanderer is losing much of its popularity One of the refugees from this jail who was driven away by the brutality of the jail officials in introducing the heel making business, is "Harry Velvet, who appeared a few days ago in this city, where he is well known Harry says I got two days of handling the dies and it was enough for me so I came away Harry recommends Belfast to the fraternity as the soft snap for there there is no heeling or work of any kind Harry does some work summers and often earns quite an amount of money, but his stock of energy does not last through the winter and he hangs up wherever the warmest fires and the most plentiful supplies of food are to be found "Treat me kindly for I fought with Grant at Shiloh" is his stock in trade and he is known far and wide for this expression Although of advanced years Harry is as straight as an arrow, and his tramping does not seem to have affected his physical welfare

AMUSEMENTS

Frank Daniels in Little Puck

The fact that Frank Daniels, with a strong company in "Little Puck" was to be the attraction at the Opera House last night served to draw a large audience, the members of which expected to be amused during the length of time usually devoted to entertainments. In this anticipation there was no disappointment, for there is a great resource of fun in the play from which to draw and the company is fully capable of making the most of it. The situations were mirth provoking and there is no pause in the merriment, except upon the fall of the curtain The comedy permits of the introduction of several songs, dances and specialties and the star and the other members of the company took full advantage of them

Mr Daniels in his dual role of father and son again manifested his right to be classed among the most clever comedians, and he was exceedingly droll in the characters which he assumed A laugh was sure to follow his inimitable sayings and doings, and these were very frequent Mr Martinetti made another hit in this city by his agile acting and he was always making lots of fun while before the footlights The other parts were taken in a most praiseworthy manner and the whole performance was given to the entire satisfaction of all present

New American Opera Company

This splendid organization will appear at the Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday evenings February 27th and 28th in Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment" and Gounod's "Faust" Under the brilliant control of that eminent director, Gustave Hinrichs, this company has achieved a success absolutely unexampled in the record of grand opera in the United States, having appeared to crowded and enthusiastic audiences in Philadelphia nightly for a period of over four months. The popularity of the artists is thus assured The appearance of the company in Bangor will naturally create unusual interest throughout society The sale of seats will open this morning at 9 o'clock

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint." — Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy."

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults." — Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled, with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life." — Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever." — Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

From this good night forward Janet was burdened and blessed with another labor of love. She had a suicide to reform; a soul without hope to fill with hope, a man without work to provide with work; a lover of lager to satisfy with black tea; a brand to snatch from all sorts of burnings. It was not only a heavy load to carry, but a delicate one to handle. Her orphan, as she soon began to call him, must not eat in her room for fear of Mrs. Grundy. She must content herself with letting him go to cheap restaurants for his dinner, and with occasionally carrying him a cup of tea to wash down the dry bread which she knew was his only supper. As for company, she firmly invited him to see her every Sunday evening; she sometimes dropped into his den to look at his work and cheer him on with it, oftener still, she took a walk with him in the hall or an evening promenade in the streets.

She was proud of herself, and yet ashamed of herself. It struck her as almost indelicate that she should support a man, especially a young and handsome one. Moreover, her labor of love was a fearful expense, compared with her small income. She was soon obliged to draw on her savings bank deposit, and that had always been kept in a contemplative state by the needs of her girl cousin. At first she thought of getting up a subscription for her painter, or of interesting some rich school committeemen in his behalf; but very shortly she took such a fancy to him that she did not want any one else to earn a claim to his gratitude; and so she went on paying out her savings for his necessities. When winter arrived and fuel must be had, she bought it for him, although he tried to do without. Next came an overcoat and a pair of mittens and some heavy underclothing, because she could not bear to see him walking the streets with a red nose and fingers. It was in vain for him to refuse; she absolutely forced him to take.

Meantime small profits from his brush. The picture which she had thought perfect really had but five or six days' work upon it, and needed a month more. And when it was done it brought only $25. It was of no use for her to scold the picture dealer for his sharpness, and to endeavor to move his pity by telling him the tale of the German's poverty. The man of art replied that it was not a known name; that paintings sold in the American market mainly by force of reputation; that he had his own living to make, and that she might take the money or leave it.

"If he can do a figure picture, and do it first rate," said this rational monster, "I can be more liberal with him. There are so many landscapes! Every American artist can make landscapes."

On this hint Ernst commenced a figure picture. It was his forte; he had simply tried a landscape because he had judged that to be the favorite genre in America. he had known that he could not hope to excel in it. A beautiful group was soon sketched, representing a scene from King Philip's war, the interior of a cabin lighted by its own flames, a beautiful girl in the grasp of Wampanoag warriors, her father and brother struggling manfully against her captors, and in the near background, faintly seen through the shattered door, a coming relief of Puritan riders. Janet Holeum, the patriotic New Englander, was delighted with what she thought already a perfect success, and wanted to sell the group as it was.

"No," judged Ernst. "I cannot afford to waste first impressions. This is the most difficult part of the painting, though the quickest. But it will need a long time to make it goot enough. It will need all winter," he concluded, with a piteously apologetical glance at Janet.

"Go on," she said, flushing with the noble heart beat of self sacrifice as she caught sight of this mute appeal. "This time I know you will triumph. We can live till it is done."

"Heaven bless you!" he replied, taking her hand and kissing it joy force. "You are the noblest woman upon the earth."

The kiss and the praise brought a deeper blush than one often sees on such a pale, sallow face as that of Janet. For we must come now to a weighty secret; we must make an avowal which is almost tragic. Not content with dowering this poor stranger with her worldly wealth, Janet had already begun to give him the treasures which she had received direct from heaven. All the love which lies hidden in the heart of a good and pure old maid, all the vast abyss of sensibility which exists in a feminine nature that has found no natural outlet, had in her case been stirred to the profoundest depths by the penniless, friendless, handsome, clever youth whom she had saved from death. Useless to struggle against the infatuation; it had commenced too insidiously, as mere humanity; then it had crept on too slyly, in the guise of mere charity. Oh, how cunning it had been! All at once there was a flaming transformation, and she found herself the victim of a first passion as much in love as if she were a young girl.

Resist? She tried in vain to do so. Run away? She could not give up her position, lest she should thereby fail to complete her cousin's education, and leave him to starve. Once more, self sacrifice; though all her life had been a self sacrifice, she must go on with it; she must love and suffer and be silent. And so the mischief proceeded, at a terrible rate, for every day added to its magnitude. What made things worse was that Ernst was nobly conscious of his obligations, and profuse in thanks, in praises, in the most delicate and charming attentions. If he met her on the street he took his hat entirely off his comely head and saluted her as a gentleman's are not always saluted. If he walked with her he had the air of escorting a duchess. He would leave his beautiful labor at any moment to greet her return to the house with a smile or to run on her errands. His whole deportment toward her was a continual burning of incense.

She had never before known such a finished gentleman, more than that, she had never met a sweeter and finer nature. She comprehended at last that even his attempted suicide was a proof of his high self respect and sense of honor, inasmuch as it was an effort to escape from the degradation of living by incurring debts which he could not discharge. That solecal declaration, "If I could, I vaf paid my room rent, I would haf gone on another month," seemed to her now something like a patent of nobility. Unaware of her own grandeur of character, she worshiped his grandeur of character. Finally, she worshiped his genius, which had begun to show her the universe of glory that there is in art, and which was able to seize ideas scarcely perceptible to her unpracticed esthetic vision, and place them before her in the resurrection robes of drawing and color.

Ah well, she was desperately in love with him, and she could not help admitting it to their accusing conscience and could not put aside the scornful finger of her sense of womanly shame. But did he know it? As yet she was sufficiently herself to hope that he did not. Although she could not meet him without feeling a blush run through her whole face, although his praises and the touch of his hand made her tremble from head to foot, she trusted that she was keeping her fiery secret. And so she was; a young man does not easily suspect that a woman thirteen years his senior has a passion for him; and if Ernst noticed her tremors and changes of color, he imputed them to woman's delicacy and Puritan shyness. While Janet looked in her own room, was looking in the glass at her pale face, high cheek bones, square jaws, straight mouth, and incipient wrinkles, while she was wishing with both tears and shame that all that supportable plainness were beauty and youth, he, steadily at work, did not think of her at all, or only thought of her as his "goot vriend." His handsome countenance, now pink and white in color as well as classic in outline, was untroubled by the slightest cloud from the fires of love, unless indeed he remembered now and then his lost [illegible] in fatherland.

About the time that "The Rescue" (as Janet christened the scene from Philip's war) reached its finishing point, Ernst encountered an American artist named Stanley. Stanley was a "portrait" painter in high fashion, who made [illegible] a year and spent it all [illegible] [illegible] art without ever being able to give up his pot boiling labor for kit kats. The result of this existence, acting upon this kindly spirit, was that, while Stanley envied the chances of more famous artists, he honestly admired their productions.

Meeting Ernst at the Academy, he fell into chance conversation with him, liked his naive and badly pronounced but judicious criticisms, went with him to his lodgings and fell in love with "The Rescue." His florid face flushed crimson with enthusiasm as he exclaimed: "By Jove! you are on the road to fame. You needn't have apologized for your room. This picture furnishes it like a palace. I wish I was a poor devil, I wish I could live in this style and try to do something good. But I can't! I must dress in a certain way and go to certain parties and live in a certain quarter. If I didn't I should lose my run among certain people. And then," he added, as he thought of his mother and aunt, "then there would be trouble."

Thereafterward Stanley came often to Ernst's room to watch the progress of "The Rescue" and to tell him that it was sure of success. It was not long, either, before he gave the young German another startling piece of information.

"That old girl down stairs is in love with you," he said.

"That old girl down stairs is in love with you."

"What old curl!" asked Ernst, staring with the calm innocence of a child.

"Miss Holeum."

"I hope you are misdaken," replied the German, gravely and almost solemnly, as if he already perceived an awful duty before him.

"I should think you might see it," grinned Stanley. "I saw it the first evening we called on her. It was plain enough today when she traveled up here to look at the picture. She can't come near you without coloring and shaking."

Ernst became still more solemn and was evidently in profound thought.

"You must be careful and not trifle with her young affections," Stanley continued, with a rather hard hearted smile, such as two accord to the heart troubles of old maids.

"I haf not dryyle with them," replied Ernst, with a seriousness which silenced the American.

During Stanley's next visit Ernst said to him: "I have peen seeing for myself, and I pelieve you are right."

"Right! Oh, about the shadow?"

"No! Apout Miss Chanet Holeum. I pelieve she is in love with me."

"Well, what are you going to do?" laughed Stanley.

"I haf put one thing to do. If she wish to marry me, I must marry her. I owe her my life. I owe her this picture, which you say is goot. I haf lived on her money. As a man of honor I must sacrifice myself to her; that is, if she wishes it. What else can I do?"

"Good Lord! don't be a fool," remonstrated Stanley. "You don't love her, of course."

"I haf the very highest respect for her. She is an admirable woman."

"Yes, I know. I suppose so. But this is carrying respect and gratitude a little too far. She is twelve or fifteen years older than you. You could not be happy with her. Come now! don't be hasty."

"I will not be hasty. It all depends whether she lofes me a great teal. We will see."

When Ernst, convinced that Janet "lofed him a great teal," felt himself bound to declare an affection for her and asked her to be his wife, the poor, lonely, little, unloved girl was fairly broken down by the revelation. She burst into tears, threw herself on her old, hard sofa, buried her face in the threadbare cushion, and sobbed out a spasm of mingled joy and terror.

"Oh! can this be true?" she finally burst forth when she became conscious of his hand in hers. "Is it true?" she demanded, sitting up and looking eagerly at him. "If it isn't, take it back. Don't tell it to any more. It would kill me—to find out it isn't true—oh, it would kill me."

"It is entirely drue, my tear Chanet," was the adorable falsehood of the chivalrous German. "I owe all to you. My life will not pay the debt. But I do not insist upon marriage, except when you wish it. You must chudge for yourself when it will be brudent."

At this moment Janet caught a view of herself in her mirror. Flushed with joy and love, she looked almost handsome, and it seemed to her for a moment that she was young and desirable. Drawn by Ernst's pitying embrace, she believed that it was the embrace of affection, and she let her head fall upon his shoulder with the words, "Oh, my darling!"

Henceforward they were engaged, though when they would be married neither of them could say, not even the old and wise (only half wise) Janet. With her, life was a delicious dream, forgetful altogether of the hard past and careless often of the doubtful future. With him, life was a point of honor and of duty, an obedience to self respect and a rendering of obligations. His ways were naturally so caressing, and he was so conscientiously assiduous in his attentions to her, that she thoroughly deceived even the suspiciousness of her humble and shy nature. In the main she believed entirely in his affection, amazing as the acquisition seemed to her, and much as she doubted her worthiness of it. It is quite possible that there was not at that time in New York a happier woman than this almost penniless old maid, betrothed to a young artist who was encumbered with debts and who did not love her. Such are the joys of this world—half of them, at least, delusions, the other half transitory.

At last "The Rescue" was sold. Stanley went with Ernst to the picture dealer, demanded, with much pomp of manner, a private audience, exposed the canvas in the best light, and asked $500 [illegible].

"It is worth it," confessed Mr. Molpean. "Only there is no name. If you would put your name to it, Mr. Stanley?"

"Mine! I am only a portrait painter."

"Yes. But you are known. It would sell the picture."

"Tell him the name," interposed Ernst, with the eagerness of a beggar grasping at alms.

"It's a downright swindle," said the generous American. "I couldn't do such a thing to save my life. I won't take the credit of it."

"Both names?" suggested the dealer in genius.

ECONOMICAL BAKING POWDER.

A curious housekeeper of experience recently made a careful practical test of the comparative baking value of a large number of the baking powders in the market, including those of low and high cost. She found that twenty-five cents' worth of Horsford's Bread Preparation raised more flour and produced much better results than the same money's worth of the cheap adulterated powders, and was equal to twenty cents' worth of the ordinary high cost baking powders.
